The horizontal bars were removed and chrome trim was added, and the corral around the pony was thinner than in '67. The side scoops were thin chrome pieces, and "Mustang" on the fenders was written in script rather than block letters. 1968 was the first year for shoulder seat belts. Ford's larger 427 was introduced on 1968 Mustang GTs.

There are no aftermarket additions, and even the original Ford factory sticker for the air conditioning remains in place on the dash. As well as A/C, the Mustang comes equipped with an AM radio. There appears to be a lot of potential locked away in this 1968 Mustang, but I would still want to subject the car to a personal inspection.
