"Cylindrical Cow" encourages conceptual understanding rather than providing plug-and-chug formulas. There were just a few cases where I would have preferred a little more guidance (for example, the chapter on feedback loops didn't have enough worked-through examples). All in all a great book to have on hand, and refreshing in its clarity.

Step 1, Paint the spool white. Cover all sides of a large wooden spool with white craft paint. Allow the paint to dry. Note that the spool will be the body of the cow. Since you need to paint the entire spool, separate the work into two steps so that the paint can dry properly. Paint the cylindrical side first, and after it dries, paint the top and bottom faces.Step 2, Add black blotches. Cover the cylindrical side of the spool with spots of black paint. Let the paint dry. These spots should ...
